

From a work entitled "The Unique."

TO A PINE. Old Tree! whose waving arms were kindly spread O'er me when childhood's early pranks were played Beneath whose shade my youthful fancy's dreams Were muttered mingling with the voice of streams Whose whispering foliage, greeting every breeze, Still promised coming days of blissful case; To thy accustomed shelter oft I stray, To muse o'er scenes of many a by-gone day. What though no fertile vale thy root has fed, No flowers, nor clustering vines around thee spread Tho' moss-crowned rocks and knolls of bristling ferr Make thy high mountain site more proudly stern-Still, still I love thee, for my early thought

A larger view of all her loveliness, A nearcr, of her wild and witching grace. When rosy fingered Morn her glories shed, Or meek-eyed Eve her shadowy curtain spread, When spring returned with flowers and swelling

Here learnt to dwell on nature--gladly caught

Or autumn tinged with varied hues the woods; But chief when leafy summer's raging heat Drove the light songeters to thy cool retreat-Here still my lingering step would fondly stray And dreamy musings melt the hours away.

O when my weary pilgrimage is o'er, And care and study harrass me no more, May thy green rustling bonghs screncly wave Over the verdant honors of my grave. For I would lie in this neglected spot, My name, my sorrows, all slike forgot, Nor have a verse the wanderer's notice claim, Where nature's warblers sing my requiem.

MUNGO MACKAY.

There is no part of the world where a new preacher, whether new lights or blue-lights, produces a greater sensation than in Boston, though after he has gone; the people may relapse into their quiet Unitarian paths, still in search of any novelty in religion; and if they do not always change their belief with every fresh importation, they at least pay him of which I am speaking, one of those wander- fused, stating that unless her rent was paid ing theological meteors blazing around Boson, and people from every lane and by-way flocked to see it, not with pieces or smoked glass in their fingers, but with ten cent pieces and York shillings, to drop into the green box, by way of adding fuel to the flames. So great was the crowd, that the ordinary rules about quiet possession of pews for which the owners had paid, were entirely broken down; every new just under the shadow of the pulpit, and sat bolt upright, with his arms extended with an apparent degree of unnatural rigidity down by the sides. He was presently surrounded by half a dozen females, nearly all of whom were strangers to his person, and in a little time the church was full to overflowing. The psalm was sung, the prayer said, the sermon. delivered in the preacher's best style. He dwelt particularly upon the requireme ts of the great precept of brotherly love, upon the beauty of universal benevolence, on the pleasure which arises not only from clothing the naked | learnt the whole of her story. and feeding the hungry, but from attention to the minute and graceful courtesies of life by had'nt ought to be lathered with hot tar, In the language of critics in such matters, ed, for laying his grapling irons on a few loose "there was not a dry eye in the place:" the appeal found its way to every heart. All Macfected: he wept with them; the big tears chased plenty of ballast and provisions. I say you each other down his cheeks. While every land lubbers just belay there upon them things, one else was busy with their handkerchiefs we'll be responsble for the damage." wiping away the water that the orator, like a second Moses, had by the strokes of his elolength a young widow lady, who sat beside Herald. him, remarked that he was ill at ease, and heaven bless the female heart! it always melts at any misterious sorrow-after one or two downcast looks and fluttering pauses, she said in the matter with you; you appear to be unwell."

"Ah! madam," breathed Mackay in a whisper, "I am a poor paralytic, and have lost the use of my arms. Though my tears have flowed in answer to the touching sentiments of the pastor, I have not the power to wipe them Miss Curry, who returned the signal. They away." In an instant a fair hand was thrust into a reticule and a white handkerchief, scented with otto of rose was applied to Mackay's the first opportunity of practising what had the shift and gentleman—there's the been so recently preached, appeared to polish lady began to count her fingers. I'm not them with right good will. When she had done, Mackay looked unutterable obliga-plied the lady—I wish said she—looking at tions, but whispered that she would increase them a thousand fold if she would, as it ted the gentleman, then marry me. Just as wanted it very much, condescend to wipe his you please, said the lady. And suiting the nose. The novelty of the request was thoungt action to the word, their marriage closed the nothing of; the widow was proud of the promptitude she had displayed in succoring the distressed; and to a person who has done you one kind action, the second seems always easy. Her white hand and whiter handkerchief were raised to Mackay's cutwater; but the moment that it was completely enveloped in the folds of the cambric, he gave such a sneeze as made the whole church ring—it was, in fact, more like a neigh. The minister paused in giving out the hymn; the deacons put on their spectaan instant every eye was turned upon Mac- May 18-12tf.

kay and the fair Samaritan; the latter of whom, being so intent upon her object, or so confounded by the general notoriety she had acquired, still convulsively grasped the nose.

There were hundreds of persons in the church who knew Mackay and his propensities well, and a single glance was sufficient to convince that a successful hoax had been played off for their amusement. A general titter now ran round the place: "nods and becks, and wreathed smiles" were the order of the day. Men held down their heads and laughed out-right; and the ladies had to stuff the scented cambric into their mouths; which had been so recently applied to the sparkling founts above. At length something like order was restored, the hymn sung, and the blessing given, amidst stifled noises of various kinds, when the congregation rose to depart. The widow, up to this point, feeling strong in the consciousness of having performed a virtuous action upon a good looking face, heeded not the gaze of the curious nor the smiles of the mirthful; but what was her astonishment when Mackay rose from his seat, lifted up one of his paralytic hands and took his hat from a peg above his head and with the other began searching his pocket for his gloves! Though the unkindest cut of all was yet to come-for Mackay having drawn them on, and opened the pew door, turned, and bowing to his fair friend, put this question in a tone the most insinuating, but still loud enough for fifty people to hear: "Is it not, madam, a much greater pleasure to operate upon a fine looking Roman nose like mine, than upon such a queer little snub as you have?"

NOBLE CONDUCT OF TWO SEA-MEN.

The general character of a sailor is proverbial but seldom has it fallen to our happy lot to record an act more truly noble, than the following, which took place a few days ago, in this

A poor widow woman who occupied two rooms in a house, in the lower part of Commercial street, since the death of her husband, about six months since, has been compelled to earn a living for herself, and a family of young children, by taking in washing; and with all her industry and economy, her quarterly rent bill became due, before she could scrape together sufficient to discharge it. Unfortunately for her; the landlord was one of they have no objections to wander out of them "Old Crumbs" school, cold and calculating, mercenary and unfeeling. His sole business was to collect his rents, and all his recreation seemed to be, to distress the virtuous. She the compliment of hearing what he has got to begged of him to grant her time. He gave say. There happened to be during the period her two days—she asked for more and he rebefore twelve o'clock on the following day, every stick of her furniture should be put out

The time arrived, when agreeable to promise, his lackeys were sent down, and the threat was begun to be put into execution. The poor woman prayed the unfeeling laudlord to desist in his purpose, but her prayers were in vain.
